Dear Madam/Sir,

If you are looking for someone with strong research and analytical skills my lifeline provides an excellent example for it.

I did medical research for almost 20 years in academic and industrial environment as well. As a project manager and research leader data analysis and presentation is part of the everyday routine. Numerous international publications reference well for this activity.

Due to the fluctuating economic environment I gathered a lot of experience outside the scope of my profession, ie, database design, web development.

Moving to UK, I took the quickest job opportunity to support my life as a security officer. In the meantime I professionalized my knowledge on data and data insights. I attended course at Southampton and I continuously expand my knowledge by self-education.

Although my background is far from conventional, with my versatile experience and personal skills I am an excellent addition to any team.

Best Regards,
Peter Simsa
